EXPERIENCE

Justin Williams is a security risk management leader known for building, transforming and leading teams that create and protect value for organizations across multiple industries. His strategies create value, while delivering practical risk reduction for businesses with a keen focus on operational and cost optimization. Justin's two decades of developed strategies are shaped by a deep technical understanding, threat awareness and passion to protect Americas National Security.

He is responsible for delivering practical risk reducing programs that span cybersecurity, product security, supply chain security, physical security and resiliency. He is an expert in the application of federal regulatory matters, DFARS 7012 and CMMC, against commercial organizations doing business with the federal government.

He is further responsible for the go to market efforts, creating new market opportunities to deliver value realization from technology enabled capabilities. Justin is a regular speaker, advising boards and leaders on security risks and risk mitigation.
