

EVY POUMPOURAS

Former Secret Service Special Agent and Interrogator

Calm under fire and precise in her message, Evy Poumpouras brings the hard-earned lessons of the world's most high-stakes environments to audiences seeking clarity, confidence, and control when it matters most. Evy is a former U.S. Secret Service Special Agent and Interrogator, NBC Law Enforcement Analyst, television host, best-selling author, and CEO of the training platform Beyond Bulletproof. She is widely recognized for her authority on human behavior, influence, and decision-making under pressure. The recipient of the Medal of Valor Award for her actions during the September 11 attacks at the World Trade Center, Evy's experiences in her action-packed career shape her perspective on leadership and resilience.

Exclusively represented by Leading Authorities speakers bureau, Evy began her career with the New York City Police Department before joining the U.S. Secret Service, where she protected Presidents William J. Clinton and George W. Bush and served on the personal details of President Barack Obama and First Lady Michelle Obama. In addition to protective operations, she conducted complex criminal investigations, worked undercover assignments, and traveled internationally on high-risk cases as a trained polygraph examiner and interrogator.

On stage, Evy Poumpouras brings a commanding presence and a welcome edge to the stage, challenging audiences to look inward and take ownership of how they lead, communicate, and perform under pressure. Through gripping, firsthand stories from her Secret Service career, she shows audiences how to apply elite principles of communication, psychology, and leadership to overcome obstacles and drive results at work and beyond.

As NBC's Law Enforcement Analyst, Evy provides expert insight on breaking news involving crime, national security, and criminal justice. Her television work includes History's Greatest Mysteries, serving as a judge on Bravo's Spy Games, a hunter on CBS's The Hunted, and contributions to HLN's Dr. Drew On Call. Across platforms, her influence lies in her ability to read situations quickly, communicate with precision, and help audiences understand the subtle dynamics that shape outcomes in moments of conflict or uncertainty.

Evy is the author of Becoming Bulletproof: Protect Yourself, Read People, Influence Situations, and Live Fearlessly, an international best-seller published in multiple languages, with additional writing featured in CNBC, MSNBC, Newsweek, Forbes, Fortune, The New Yorker, and Cosmopolitan. She is the CEO of Beyond Bulletproof, an online training platform focused on leadership, communication, and conflict navigation. Evy also serves as host and lead instructor for the BBC Maestro course The Art of Influence. A two-time TEDx presenter whose talks and digital content have surpassed 50 million views worldwide, Evy is a sought-after keynote for Fortune 500 companies, government agencies, and global organizations.
